

CAPSULE
FRANK SCHULER HOUSE

Dr. Grafton M. Bosley was initially responsible for the residential development of west Towson. He was a prominent land owner who is especially noted for having donated part of his estate for the site of the Court House and Jail in 1853. By 1899, Bosley Avenue, Allegheny Avenue, W. Pennsylvania Avenue, W. Chesapeake Avenue, Highland Avenue and later Central Avenue were laid out for accessibility to lots ready for public development. Although he died in 1901 before much development took place, Dr. Bosley was represented by his trustees who continued to administer his land.

Presently, areas such as west Towson are seeing the commercial growth of central Towson slowly creeping into their own neighborhoods. However, very few high rises are seen here (existing only on two border areas) and many commercial alterations have been sensitive to the residential quality home owners are hoping to maintain.

This is one house that has remained residential since it was built in 1910 by Frank Schuler. The rich brown wooden shingles, hipped roof with gabled dormers and leaded glass windows give it a character all its own as it dominates the corner of Allegheny and Highland Avenues.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Exterior Only:

Allegheny Avenue retains its residential scale, although several structures have been converted for commercial use. One house that has remained residential is # 309. This house sits on the corner of Allegheny and Highland Avenues and is reported by the present owner to have been built in 1910.

This frame 2½ story structure rests on a stone foundation. The walls are covered with the original brown wooden shingles and are topped by a slate hipped roof.

The main facade of the nearly square block faces North. Most prominent is the single story porch and hipped roof which is supported by four full doric columns. It covers a most interesting first level. Features include a large glass door with side lights in the east bay, with a projecting bay window in the west. This window contains narrow 6/1 sash windows on the sides and larger 9/1 sash in the center. All windows have louvered shutters.

The second level has a squared bay projection in the east bay which has two narrow 6/1 sash windows with one shutter per window. The west bay is the same as the first level.

On the east end of the roof is a pedimented dormer vented by a pair of small 4/1 sash windows.

The western one-half of this facade's roof is a pedimented gable vented by similar windows.

A brick chimney pierces the ridge in the northernmost end.

The west facade is a large two bays wide. Fenestration is somewhat irregular in type.

The cellar is lighted by two casements. The north bay of the first level has a pair of nine light casements. The south bay, however, contains a bay projection similar to the ones on the north facade. This bay is covered with a slate hood hipped to relate to the main roof. The second level has 9/1 sash windows in each bay.

The roof here has a centrally located dormer.
